EVERY CLIENT FEELS LIKE THE FIRST.

1. You're not busy.

   You're reinventing the same work.

2. "I'll systemize when I scale"

   is backwards. Systems come first.

3. A blank-page proposal

   isn't service. It's unpaid rework.

4. Onboarding by email thread spends trust when it's most fragile.

5. A method in your head

   is a job you can never leave.

6. Did it by hand three times?

   That's a system. Write it down.

7. Client ten should cost you

   less than client one.

You don't have a capacity problem.

You pay a reinvention tax.

— Sam Trabulsi